

Faith, Frolic and Fundamentals

MARAC Spring 2012 Meeting * April 12–14, 2012 Congress Hall * Cape May, New Jersey

The Local Arrangements and Programs committees invite you to join us in Cape May, NJ, April 12-14, to explore Faith, Frolic and Fundamentals, a theme that reflects the incredible culture of this often overlooked part of the Garden State. From the iconic tourism of Atlantic City and enduring doo-wop culture of Wildwood to Victorian and versatile Cape May, this conference is sure to engage archivists from the Mid-Atlantic region and beyond with the true flavor of the southern Jersey Shore experience. The sessions in Cape May reflect not only the spirit of the region, but also are designed to educate attendees on the basic components of archival science needed to preserve the documentary history of all communitiesacademic, industrial, military, spiritual, public and private alike. We will not only have first rate speakers address relevant issues, but also provide information in a thoughtful and thoughtprovoking manner while at the same time keeping the lighthearted theme of the conference alive.

We have a tremendous lineup of moderators, speakers and session chairs who have volunteered a great deal of time and care to making this one memorable conference. The "Fundamentals" sessions will deal with important topics such as preservation and conservation of archival materials, job survival, emergency preparedness, digital and electronic record keeping and collection processing. Faith comes in many forms, much like sessions that will explore archival connections to spiritual topics, in particular missionary traditions, sacred texts, and even local ties to famed preachers and regional religious representation. Frolic will be expressed, although not in a frivolous sense, in sessions on Friday that focus on Cape May architecture along with tales of potent potables, politics and sensationalism in the longtime lore of Southern New Jersey. This will all be a compliment and prelude to a special Saturday session that will focus on the practical and preservation work related to the popular "Boardwalk Empire" program and its place in popular and archival culture. All talks will stress the importance of our profession and will combine different elements of our thematic trifecta for you to enjoy.

We know you will love the hospitality in cool Cape May where you can enjoy fresh seafood and delicious cuisine prepared in restaurants within walking distance of your relaxing accommodations. Our headquarters hotel Congress Hall was once the official summer White House for our 23rd President Benjamin Harrison and the vacation home for Presidents Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan and Ulysses S. Grant. You will be treated as an honored guest at MARAC's Gala Reception on Friday evening under the tent on the great lawn where a Congress Hall regular, John Philip Sousa, conducted the Marine Corps Band in 1882. On Thursday night, Groucho Marx will appear at the Hospitality in Congress Hall's Boiler Room Night Club.

Plan to come early and stay awhile to enjoy all there is to offer at the Southern New Jersey shore. Walk the beach along the majestic Atlantic Ocean, then experience the charming City of Cape May and its abundance of Victorian era buildings. Be sure to register for one of the planned trolley tours or walking tours especially designed for MARAC attendees.

Jump off at Exit Zero for countless waves of informationsharing opportunities to be presented here. Thank you in advance for your interest and attendance at the sessions planned for you here during this faith, frolic and fundamentals filled Cape May conference!

Archives and the Architectural Historian

In the fall of 2005, the Cape May County Historical and Genealogical Society hired historic preservation consultant Joan Berkey to research and write a social and architectural history of the Society's historic house museum, then known as the John Holmes House. Where previous histories of the house relied primarily on data obtained via oral tradition and secondary sources, Berkey looked at deeds, wills, land divisions, Holmes family correspondence, and survey maps. As a result of Berkey's work, part of the house's history has been entirely re-written. Ms. Berkey will draw upon her vast experience as a consultant, historian, and author to discuss the importance of primary sources contained in archives when researching space and place: the history of a building, the people who lived in it, and the place where a building is located.

Politics, Booze and Scandal—Cape May County During Prohibition
The Prohibition Era is perceived to have been a sleepy time in Cape May County, with the illicit and illegal "action" centered just up the coast in Atlantic City. Such was not the case at all! Cape May County local historian and lecturer Michael Conley will tell the colorful story of the people and places that livened up the Cape May County headlines during the 1920s and 1930s. People like Democratic Party political leader Judge Henry Eldridge and the troublesome Ms. Berta Brown, as well as events such as the raid on "The Red Onion" brothel and the endless pursuit of illegal stills are just some of the topics that Conley brings to life in what he refers to as the "Beach and Back—Bay Empire" of Cape May County.

W1. Do We Need to Save that Offering Envelope?: The Archives of the Local House of Worship

Half Day Workshop: 9:00 am-12:00 pm

Registration Minimum: 12 Registration Maximum: 25

Cost: $45.00

Dale Patterson, United Methodist Church Archives

Local churches, parishes, synagogues and other houses of worship are about much more than piety, worship or even genealogy. Many operate education programs, thrift shops and food pantries, while also being involved with social issues within the community. Documenting these initiatives is an important part of documenting local communities.

This workshop will focus on the care and management of local church and parish records. Most local congregations are already part of a larger archival management program and identifying and contacting those programs will also be discussed. Finally, the instructor will give guidance on how to train and encourage dedicated local volunteers to care for and manage their records.

CONGRESS HALL, CAPE MAY, N.J., BETWEEN 1900 AND 1915, DETROIT PUBLISHING COMPANY. LIBRARY OF CONGRESS PRINTS AND PHOTOGRAPHS DIVISION.

Half Day Workshop: 9:00 am-12:00 pm

Registration Minimum: 12 Registration Maximum: 25

Cost: $45.00

Instructor:

Rebecca Goldman, La Salle University

This workshop will provide an introduction to Omeka, free and open-source software for creating digital collections and exhibits. In the first part, participants will work with free sites created on Omeka.net and learn how to create items in digital collections, provide metadata, upload files, and build exhibits around their digital items. The instructor will also cover basic site maintenance such as switching site themes, managing users, and installing plugins. In the second part, participants will work with self-hosted Omeka sites and learn how to upload new plugins and themes to their sites, as well as to customize existing themes (HTML and CSS knowledge is helpful but not required). There will be time for participants to ask questions and get help as they work independently with their Omeka sites.

Please Note: Participants will need a laptop with wireless capability to fully participate in the first part of this workshop and an existing self-hosted site and FTP client to fully participate in the second part. Participants will receive instructions a few weeks before the workshop. Please contact the instructor at rebgold@gmail.com for more details.

Outreach and Instruction Doubleheader

Are you hoping to improve or expand your programming offerings for students? Come to Cape May and you can spend the day learning about outreach and instruction efforts from your experienced colleagues! Start the day with a session on National History Day and learn about the newly released NHD Toolkit. Then, after lunch on your own or with your fellow attendees, hear from two university librarians about their experience developing collaborative primary source research instruction sessions for undergraduate students.

W3. Successful Outreach to Middle and High School Students Through National History Day

Half Day Workshop: 9:00 am-12:00 pm

Registration Minimum: 12 Registration Maximum: 25

Cost: $45.00

Instructors:

Andrea Reidell, National Archives and Records Administration, Mid Atlantic Region

Doris Malkmus, Pennsylvania State University

This half-day workshop is for anyone who wants to learn more about effective student outreach. The framework for discussion will be National History Day, a Congressionally-authorized history education program based on primary-source research and critical thinking and writing skills. Independent research has documented that students who participate in NHD have improved academic outcomes—not just in history, but also in math and science—and are more "career ready" than students who do not participate in NHD.

Workshop instructors will demonstrate effective methods for introducing middle and high school students to primary sources; guiding students from an initial broad topic to a specific research question; selecting appropriate sources; and determining reliability in online and in-house sources. The workshop will include a range of options for collaboration and outreach. Using the new NHD Toolkit (http://nhdarchives.pbworks.com/), the instructors will cover practical advice for archivists about managing class visits, including tactics for efficient registration and retrieval, staffing, and setting rules and reasonable expectations. The workshop will conclude with an interactive session in which participants tailor an outreach plan for their own repository.

W4. Archival Instruction: Promoting Collections, Information Literacy and Collaboration

Half Day Workshop: 1:00 am-4:00 pm

Registration Minimum: 12 Registration Maximum: 25

Cost: $45.00

Instructors:

Leah Donnelly, George Mason University Jason Byrd, George Mason University

Instruction has become an increasingly popular trend in the archival field for promoting collections and educating users on the research process. Too often archivists and librarians are working in isolation on instruction efforts. In 2011, the presenters started an outreach initiative at George Mason University Libraries using library and archival resources to collaboratively teach primary and secondary source research skills at the undergraduate level. The workshop will draw from the presenters' experience in developing these programs with a focus on primary source research.

Workshop participants will craft learning outcomes and research assignments that are appropriate for a variety of educational levels and institutions, focusing on four key aspects:

- 1. Research: promoting research in primary sources by exploring local and/or institutional history; using electronic and paper archival resources
- 2. Instruction: modifying information literacy concepts to align with the specifics of the historical research process; using emerging technologies to engage users during instruction
- 3. Collaboration: fostering a spirit of collaboration between archivists and subject librarians; drawing on the unique expertise each field has to offer
- 4. Outreach: promoting special collections and archives to the broader user community

W5. Dating 19th Century Portrait Photographs

Half Day Workshop: 1:00 pm-4:00 pm

Registration Minimum: 12 Registration Maximum: 25

Cost: $45.00

Instructor:

Gary D. Saretzky, Monmouth County (N.J.) Archives

Old portrait photographs are often found without a date, but trained archivists can frequently estimate dates fairly precisely based on the type of photograph; sitter's identity and clothing; physical characteristics of the photo, including mounting styles and mount information; photographer; and other factors. The date may be needed by researchers but it is also helpful for cataloging and to confirm identification of the subject.

In this half-day workshop, the presenter will explain major types of 19th century photographic processes used for portraiture and when they were popular, followed by techniques for dating photographs. Participants will learn how to use a micrometer to measure mounting board thickness. Slide presentations, with several hundred examples will show dated cartes-de-visite, cabinet cards, and ferrotypes to help participants learn how the look of such images and their mounts evolved between the 1850s and 1900. The presenter will also bring vintage examples of the various processes and discuss how to identify and date them. After the lecture, participants will break up into pairs and try to date original examples using the micrometer and handouts with dating tips. The presenter will provide published references helpful for dating photographs and a bibliography of relevant publications and websites. Although not the main focus, the presenter will also provide guidance on the preservation of 19th century photographs. Participants may bring examples from their own collections for analysis and discussion.

Concurrent Sessions

Friday, April 13

10:45 am-12:15 pm

S1. Preservation and Conservation of Captured and Born Digital Materials

High quality imaging and other digital systems now provide us with remarkable capabilities for capturing and rendering exquisite detail. It is the state of an art and a science, but it is also just a beginning. If we are to digitally capture our most fragile collections, what else do we need to commit to insure our objects will be available forever? Many plans have emerged to accomplish this task and our panel of curators will offer their insights, experience, frustrations and reasonable expectations for the future of captured and born digital objects in our collections.

Chairs:

Jordon Steele, Johns Hopkins University

Speakers:

Isaiah Beard, Rutgers University Libraries Gretchen Gueguen, University of Virginia Tim Pyatt, Pennsylvania State University

S2. Documenting the Global Church: Missionary Archives from Diverse Traditions

Once regarded as tainted by imperialism, missionary archives are now recognized as key resources for studying non-Western societies. In this session, speakers from two Protestant denominational archives will explore missionary records as a source for cultural and political understanding worldwide, while an archivist from a manuscript repository will discuss sources related to fund-raising and medical missionaries.

Chair

Adriana Kuzyszyn, Rutgers University

Speakers:

Leah Gass, Presbyterian Historical Society Mary Ann Quinn, Rockefeller Archives Center Russell Gasero, Reformed Church in America Archives

S3. Preserving the Right to Frolic: The Military and the Beach

Just when you thought it was safe to go back in the water...it is, thanks to the United States Armed Forces. For some, the mere mention of the beach conjures images of boardwalks and sunbathers. For others though, it brings to mind critical missions such as coastal defense, base construction, disaster relief, and the storming of enemy beachheads. Join a panel of archivists representing various branches of the Armed Forces as they explore the history and documentation of specific aspects of the relationship between the military and the beach.

Moderator:

Steven Rhodes, National Archives and Records Administration

Speakers:

Nora L. Chidlow, United States Coast Guard Historian's Office Gregory Ellis, Naval History & Heritage Command Melissa Wiford, United States Army Heritage & Education Center

S4. Bringing Students of All Ages To Our Archives

High school students as exhibit curators? Training faculty in archives use? What about engaging first-year undergraduates with archival documents or helping K-12 students interact with historic documents? Brooklyn Historical Society has actively brought students of all ages into the archives through the creation of a broad range of education-centered programs and partnerships, especially with local schools. This panel will discuss the content of these programs and their objectives as part of an overall strategy of outreach and sustaining the institution. Administrative issues such as funding, staffing, working within limited resources, and managing the impact of the programs on the archives will also be discussed.

Chair

Larry Weimer, Brooklyn Historical Society

Speakers:

Andrea Del Valle, Brooklyn Historical Society Samantha Gibson, Brooklyn Historical Society Robin M. Katz, Brooklyn Historical Society

S5. A Thoughtful Frolic through Civil War Archives with an Upshot or Two for the Sesquicentennial

Are there fresh interpretations addressing this pivotal moment in American History and the subsequent state of racial relations in the United States that would shed critical light on archives, access and collecting? Hard to find material on the African American experience from then until now, working through it to make sense of the current state of racial relations, and how archivists can respond to the Civil War Sesquicentennial are the focus of this session. Each presenter will discuss their individual research as it pertains to the understanding of both New Jersey and American Civil War history.

Moderator:

Kim Adams, New Brunswick (NJ) Public Library

Speakers:

Williamjames H. Hoffer, Seton Hall University Larry A. Greene, Seton Hall University Kenneth Cleary, Rutgers University

Joseph Bilby, New Jersey Civil War Heritage Association and New Jersey National Guard and Militia Museum

2:15 pm-3:45 pm

S6. Fundamentals of Preservation While Processing Archival Collections

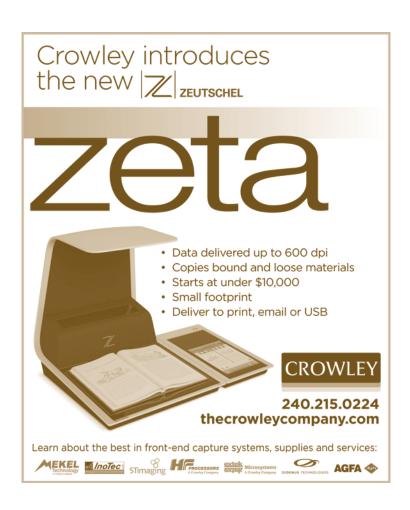

Paper clips and staples, mimeographs and thermafax paper, manila folders, floppy disks, vinyl enclosures and even dreaded rubber bands are some of the common hazards we find in archival collections. This session is a diverse panel discussion featuring commentary from four veterans of archival processing. They will comment on collections they have processed and provide special attention regarding fragile or unstable material that required either conservation treatment or intervention to mitigate the problems they encountered.

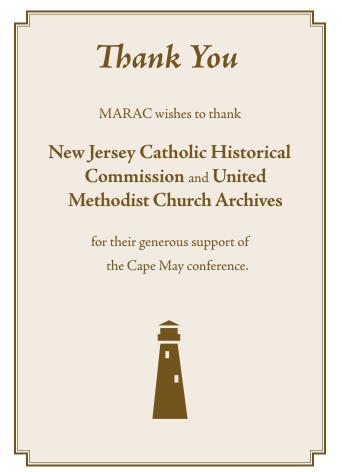

Chair:

Gary Saretzky, Monmouth County (NJ) Archives

Speakers:

Ann Kuebler, Institute for Jazz Studies, Rutgers University Ken Cleary, Rutgers University Erin Cral Alghandoor, Kean University Nicole J. Milano, Archives of the American Field Service

S7. Hire Power! Fundamentals of Job Survival

This panel will look at the challenges that new and seasoned archivists face when searching for employment prospects in the current job market. Speakers include a job hunting recent graduate, a seasoned archivist who blogs about archival job-seeking issues at eatingouryoung.wordpress.com, and an archivist who has been on the hiring end (they are out there!). They will provide advice for students, interns, grant-funded archivists, and others who want to break into or move up in the profession.

Moderator:

Tom Frusciano, Rutgers University

Speakers:

Maureen Callahan, Princeton University Dan Santamaria, Princeton University Alexandra Carter, University of Maryland

S8. Fundamentals of Emergency Preparedness: Conducting Risk Assessments

Before an institution can begin developing an emergency preparedness and response plan, it is important to understand just what kinds of risks its collections may face. A risk assessment identifies potential risks and outlines strategies that may mitigate damage in the event of an emergency or disaster. Presenters will offer tips for conducting these assessments on a site-wide level and for specific collections and records, as well as case studies of institutions that have dealt with disasters, and advice on forming relationships with first responders and other outside contacts who can help conduct risk assessments.

Chair:

Dyani Feige, Conservation Center for Art & Historic Artifacts

Speakers:

Laura Hortz Stanton, Conservation Center for Art & Historic Artifacts

TBA, Division of Archives and Records Management, New Jersey Department of State

S9. Monsters, Myths & Legends: "Haunting" Through Archival Collections For Frolicsome Tales Worth Retelling

Historic preservation and interest in the supernatural goes beyond the superficial and milestone days of fright such as Halloween or Friday the 13th alone. Our speakers will talk about the importance of documenting and preserving the folklore and urban legends of the seemingly mysterious and unexplained for future generations. These speakers come from different traditions and together will give the audience a lesson in the nature of both spine tingling and serious research from "boo" factor to acid-free box alike.

Chair:

Chirstine McCluskey, Rutgers University

Speakers:

William Meehan, Jr., Historical Society of Haddonfield (NJ) Jason Grant Speck, University of Maryland Patricia Martinelli, Vineland (NJ) Historical and Antiquarian Society

S10. Preserving and Promoting New Jersey's Historic Structures

In this session, preservation consultants, architects, and urban planners will discuss their efforts to protect and promote New Jersey's architectural history. What kinds of records in our repositories influence the preservation of historic structures? How can archivists and records managers better serve the needs of these preservation specialists? Panelists will answer these questions and highlight projects to preserve Victorian structures in Cape May County, the Doo Wop resort architecture of the Wildwoods, as well as a variety of other historic properties throughout the State of New Jersey.

Moderator:

S11. Faith and Frolicking in South Jersey Religious Gathering Places

In the late nineteenth century, religious revivals and newly discovered leisure time combined to create several distinctive communities in southern New Jersey. At Ocean Grove in Monmouth County, "beach frolicking" served as both a health restorative and Methodist holiness practice. Away from the surf, the famed Ocean Grove auditorium was the site of events both religious and fun. Another product of the camp meeting movement, Pitman in Gloucester County, became known as a town of cottagers and commuters, who today are working to preserve its unique history. During this session, the speakers will discuss these religions gathering places.

Chair:

Peter Wosh, New York University

Speakers:

Wayne T. Bell, Ocean Grove Historical Society Troy Messenger, Union Theological Seminary Debra Higbee, Pitman Museum

S12. Fundamentals of Collection Control: Where to Start and Where to Go

Do you need some basic information or ideas about how to gain physical and intellectual control of your collections? How do you leverage and assess such newly-gained control? Two of the speakers in this session will present on inventory projects they undertook at their institutions, one for a museum object collection and the other for paper-based collections. The third speaker will discuss steps her institution has taken to evaluate and enhance access, awareness, and use since improving control over hidden and underused collections.

S13. Digital Humanities in the Archives

Archivists have long appreciated the importance of understanding user needs in order to provide more effective description, reference, outreach, and other support to their patrons. Increasingly, those patrons are found in the digital humanities—a discipline that uses digital technology to facilitate and enhance research in history, literature, and the other humanities. This session will present three panelists who are currently engaged in digital humanities projects that use archival materials in creative ways such as gaming and data-mining. What potential research value do physical/paper-based archival documents, if available digitally, offer the digital humanist? What kinds of collaborations need to develop between archivists and digital humanists?

S14. Public Displays: Using Your Collection and Archives to Tell Your Story

Displaying significant materials from your collection to the public can be an important part of outreach efforts, but it is not necessarily taught in MLIS or History programs. It can be particularly difficult for articles and photographs that are of historic importance but don't grab the visitor's attention. Learn the important principles to use in evaluating how to put together your public displays, including determining the story you want to tell, the venue, the display period, and your audience. This session will also emphasize the importance of instruction in archival and history programs for the use of public exhibitions.

S15. Sacred Texts: Making the Word Known

All religious traditions have certain texts that are considered sacred. What are these sacred texts? Where are they housed? How are they treated? How do we extract meaning from sacred texts? Can the teachings of sacred texts offer insight into the ways in which members of a religion live their lives? In this session, four speakers will provide background and context to these multifaceted questions by citing specific examples from their institutional holdings.

S16. Fundamentals of Processing Large Collections—And Getting Them Done!

This session explores approaches to processing large collections sustainably from start to finish. Presenting three different scenarios, ranging from one single massive collection to multiple collections at one institution to multiple collections at multiple institutions, the speakers will share their views on balancing the access imperative with sustainable processing practices. What does "large" mean in the speakers' different contexts? What defines "sustainable" processing in the setting of their institutions? From their experiences, the speakers will address the theoretical and practical considerations that inform processing methods, best practices, workflows, policies, and tool selection.

S17. Rescuing and Making Available a Controversial Collection: The Carl McIntire Papers at Princeton Theological Seminary

A fiery fundamentalist radio preacher, staunch anti-communist political activist, and pastor of the Bible Presbyterian Church in Collingswood, New Jersey, Reverend Carl McIntire once had large real estate holdings in Cape May. This session features Curtis Bashaw, McIntire's grandson and owner of Congress Hall, relating stories about his grandfather's colorful life. It also explores the fascinating tale of how 400 linear feet of McIntire's papers were rescued at the last minute and ended up, with McIntire's blessing, at Princeton Theological Seminary, a seminary that McIntire had left in protest as a student in 1929 and with whose teaching he had frequently clashed over the years. Speakers will also discuss decisions made about processing and publicizing this extensive but controversial collection, including the challenges of developing both online and printed finding aids to the collection.

S18. Fundamentals of Electronic Records

Panelists will discuss ongoing or recent projects and highlight issues of appraisal, arrangement, description and access specific to electronic records. By focusing on foundational archival practices, panelists will discuss both the special challenges of working with e-records, as well as show that working with e-records employs familiar archival procedures and training.

Special, stand-alone session emphasizing the importance of archives to the development of the best-selling book, Boardwalk Empire, and the Emmy-winning television show adapted from it.

S19. From the Pages of History to the Screen: The Role of Archives in HBO's "Boardwalk Empire"

Archivists know that collections are the primary sources for history, since it is through their very potential that we become interested in preserving for the future. Yet, we rarely get the chance to see that potential fully realized. The recent success of Boardwalk Empire, both as a best-selling history of Atlantic City and as an Emmywinning HBO drama, is now one example we can point to and celebrate as archives (and history!) come to light. Join us as we hear about the collaboration between author, archivists, and filmmakers as they discuss the documents and research behind bringing this historical drama to print and screen.
